D86 sells first bonds for construction

By Pamela Lannom
plannom@thehinsdalean.com

The money is in the bank. Hinsdale High School District 86 has $70 million ready to pay for upcoming construction projects at Hinsdale Central and Hinsdale South high schools following a July 15 bond issue.

The bonds were sold to J.P. Morgan Securities LLC at an interest rate of 2.964, Jennifer Currier of PMA Securities told the board at its July 25 meeting.

Eight firms bid on the bonds, with rates ranging from J.P. Morgan's low offer to 3.053 on the high end.

The district will pay $97.8 million in interest on the bonds, which must be paid off by 2039. Initial estimates for debt service were $102.4 million, but lower interest rates will translate to $4.5 million in savings for the district.

"We were very pleased and we certainly hope you all are as well," Currier said.

This is the first bond issue to fund a host of construction projects slated for Central and South after voters approved a $140 million referendum in April.

Board member Marty Turek asked if the board should look at expediting the next bond issue, given the low interest rates.

Josh Stephenson, the district's chief financial officer, said the bond sales are structured so the payback period will be 22 years instead of 20, translating to a lower annual cost.

"If we condense the bond sales, that is going to increase the cost to taxpayers on an annual basis," he said.

The construction timeline has yet to be finalized, as district officials continue to meet to discuss the order in which the projects should be started.

A more definitive schedule is expected to be the product of the Aug. 16 facilities committee meeting and will be on the agenda for board discussion Aug. 22.

The board also plans to appoint a special committee to help oversee the construction process. Community members with a background in building, finance and other related fields will be invited to apply for membership.

Superintendent Tammy Prentiss is drafting an application for potential committee members. Pending board approval Aug. 8, the application will be available to the public Aug. 9. The board hopes to have a list of candidates to review by Aug. 22.

Board member Kevin Camden suggested residents who want to know more about the projects should start attending the board's finance and facilities committee meetings. The finance committee meets at 8:30 a.m. the third Wednesday of every month, and the facilities committee meets at 8:30 a.m. the third Friday of the month.

"If you're really interested, start coming to those or making yourself familiar with what's occurring," he said.

I'm dreaming of a wet Christmas

The Hinsdale Parks and Recreation Department held Christmas in July at the Hinsdale Pool Friday night. The evening included crafts, games and a visit by a summery Santa and Mrs. Claus and was capped off with a float-in screening of "Home Alone." Santa and Mrs. Claus pose with Cesar and Effy Garcia. Rory and Patrick Farnan work on creating Christmas ornaments. Lessons in science, history, God's love

Vacation Bible school at Grace Episcopal Church helps kids grow in faith, leadership

By Sandy Illian Bosch
news@thehinsdalean.com

Vacation Bible School at Grace Episcopal Church in Hinsdale is different things to different people.

To 3-year-old Alex Tims, it's an introduction to what life will be like when he starts preschool later this year. For Katie Crotty's four children, it's a chance to enjoy a common activity near the end of a busy summer. And for Crotty herself, it's an opportunity to enjoy coffee with a friend, knowing all four children are happy and cared for.

But program directors Meghan Mannor and Julie Pierce had just one primary goal in mind when they planned the church's four-day event — to teach children that God loves everyone and wants us to share that love with others.

Following the program's message, Mannor said all are welcome at Grace Episcopal's vacation Bible school.

"We want to share God's love with everyone," she said. That's why although the program is meant for no more than 100 children, there may be just a few more on this summer's VBS roster.

Grace Episcopal, which offers a full summer of activities for children, has finished things off with vacation Bible school for the last several years. Mannor said the faith-based program attracted about 40 children the first year but quickly grew in popularity.

Now, the 100-plus attendees include children as young as 3 and as old as 12, with the older students serving as junior counselors. This chance to learn responsibility and leadership skills is a first step toward Grace Episcopal's mission-based program for high school students, said Mannor, who serves as the church's year-round formation director.

Children in the four-day camp meet from 9 to noon each day and spend much of their time in groups of kids their own age. This summer's program adopts the theme of ancient Greece, so those age groups are referred to as oikos — the Greek word for "family" or "house." Each oikos is assigned an identifying color and named after an ancient Greek city.

The subtle lessons in history, geography and even science that are weaved into the week's programming are not by accident. On the first day of the program, children spent time learning about how water was moved from place to place in ancient Greece.

"They loved the aqueducts," Mannor said, referring to the marble runs they used to simulate networks of pipes, ditches and tunnels.

Day 1 also included a stop at the glass market, where children made sun catchers. The daily craft projects are a favorite of Crotty's daughters, Olivia, 8, and Bryn, 6.

Hinsdale resident Crotty said her kids have a lot of fun at vacation Bible school, but along with the crafts, the songs and the games, the program's message of God's love is getting through.

"I hear them talking about the day's story and they sing the songs," she said. "It really carries over into our week."

Each day at begins with a Bible story that sets the tone for the rest of the day's activities, which include songs, games and crafts such as pottery and friendship bracelets — a tangible way of sharing the love that is the week's primary lesson.

Even snack time is a chance to learn, Mannor said. As the children enjoyed their mid-morning meal on Monday, they were encouraged to share stories of a time when they experienced love and kindness. They also talked about how messages were sent long ago, before the conveniences of cell phones and social media.

Sarah Tims of Hinsdale said vacation Bible school at Grace Episcopal holds something valuable for each of her five sons. Three are attending this year but all have participated in the past.

While 10-year-old Walter learns responsibility and leadership as a junior counselor, 5-year-old Dean enjoys meeting other children his age from other parts of town and other nearby schools. And 3-year-old Alex is getting a taste of what it's like to spend a few hours without Mom by his side.

"They all love it," Sims said.

Island ultimate getaway for Hinsdalean

Vacation home off the coast of Maine provides connection with family, natural beauty

By Sandy Illian Bosch
news@thehinsdalean.com

Johanna Delaney always goes to her Maine vacation home with intentions of settling in for a long summer read. But she's quickly reminded that the beauty around her is far more captivating than the greatest mystery novel or romance.

"We spend a lot of time just sitting on the porch watching the water come and go," said Delaney, whose cottage on Birch Island sits just yards from the shore.

She had visited her sister's home on the island for years before she and husband Jim bought a cabin of their own seven years ago.

"I can see my sister's cottage," one of about 25 on the entire island, Delaney said.

Birch Island is home to little else. There are no stores and no electricity. Necessities such as food are a boat ride away, in Brunswick, Portland, or another seaside town on the mainland.

Delaney spends most of her summer at the cottage, staying for weeks at a time. Jim joins her as often as he can, along with friends and other members of the family. The three-bedroom cabin can sleep eight.

While the island has no access to electricity, Delaney isn't without modern conveniences such as lights, a stove and a refrigerator. All, she said, are powered by propane.

"The only things we can't do are blow dry our hair or watch TV," she said. "It's really quite magical."

The owners of the cottages on Birch Island collectively own a dock and a parking lot on the mainland, which makes visits there easy.

"It's very convenient," said Delaney, who travels less than a mile from her

■ CHANGES IN LATITUDES

This is another in a summer series about Hinsdale families and their favorite vacation spots cottage to the mainland shore.

Food is a main event on the island, with big breakfasts served each morning and delicacies like lobster purchased directly from the lobster fisherman's boat.

She and Jim enjoy swimming along the island's rocky shore and kayaking to neighboring islands, many of which are uninhabited by humans.

"We have loads of eagles, herons and osprey," Delaney said. "It's just really a getaway like no other place."

Members of the close-knit Birch Island community come together for a Fourth of July fireworks show, an annual island parade and potluck, and an occasional party, Delaney said, but she said the best entertainment is Mother Nature's ever-changing display of sunrises, sunsets and photo-worthy views.

"We get some great storms out here," Delaney said.

And of course, there is always something to fix in their century-old cottage. Most of the cottages on Birch Island, including Delaney's, were built generations ago.

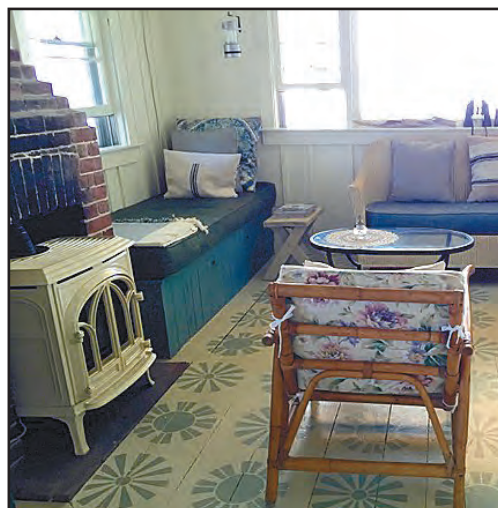

For Delaney, her island home is a place to get away and to enjoy the beauty around her. But most of all, it's a place where the people she loves can gather to enjoy one another.

"It's really a center for family and friends," she said.

As the days grow shorter, so does Delaney's time on the island. She will make one more visit to the island this year before the cabin is prepared for another winter, which she will spend back home in Hinsdale, anticipating spring and her return to island life.

Johanna and Jim Delaney's century-old cottage on Casco Bay in Maine is a great place to gather with friends for a lobster dinner or a quiet afternoon watching the tide. Guests, such as the Delaneys' son, Daniel, and his friends are always welcome. (photos provided)

Actress brings mind, humor to 'Matilda' lead

Hinsdale's Ella Russell has spent her summer honing her supernatural powers, theatrically speaking.

Russell, 11, is one of two young actors portraying the titular character in BAMtheatre's production of "Matilda" Aug. 2-4 at Nazareth Academy in LaGrange Park (see Page 24 for details). The musical is based on Roald Dahl's beloved novel about a highly precocious girl equipped with telekinetic abilities, which emerge in confrontations with her contemptible parents, Mr. & Mrs. Wormwood, and her oppressive headmistress, Miss Trunchbull.

"She doesn't like anybody, but especially Matilda," Russell said of the story's villain.

Thankfully Matilda finds an ally and advocate in her teacher, Miss Honey, and works to thwart the wrongdoers with hilarious results.

"She can stand up to people who are a lot more powerful than her," Russell said. "She stands up to Miss Trunchbull even though all the other students are scared of her."

Russell got her start in the world of acting at age 4. But it was during her turn as a young Cosette in BAM's staging of "Les Miserables" when she was 7 that theater became a serious pursuit.

"That was a really special time. Everyone there was a lot older than me, and I really enjoyed having those role models," she reflected. "Seeing them made me want to be more like them when I get older."

Russell was well-versed on the Matilda story, having both read the book and watched the 1996 film adaptation. Memorizing the sheer volume of lines for her character presented a challenge, she said, as did trying to portray a girl with uncommon traits.

"She's a tough character to play, I think, because she's very unique," Russell said.

The experience has helped her mature in her performance and her resiliency.

"If I mess up, sometimes it can be hard to keep going. But you have to do that," she said.

Thinking back to auditions, Russell is amazed at the evolution of the production over the past few months

"It's just cool to watch it from the beginning and just keep progressing and keep progressing until we have a whole show put together," she said.

Russell hopes the musical leaves theatergoers laughing and thoroughly entertained.

"Just getting some type of reaction from an audience, it's a good feeling," she said.

Russell has enjoyed using her faux superpowers and said those talents could certainly come in handy in real life.

"I would either want the power to turn invisible, or have (Matilda's) power where you can move things with your mind," she said

She's also become mindful of the true ability she possesses to impact her juniors in the cast, just as she was influenced by her elders as a stage neophyte.

"I used to be a little tiny looking up to people who were 10 and 11, and now I'm that person that little kids look up to," she said.

The heat can be sweet, but know your limits

Summer is the time to soak up outdoor pleasures. But it's also the season for high temperatures and humidity, which can foil the fun if one is overexposed to them.

Heat exhaustion and heat stroke can escalate rapidly, leading to delirium, organ damage and even death. In 2017, according to the National Safety Council, 87 people died in the U.S. from exposure to excessive heat. Infants and young children, seniors and those with chronic health conditions are most at risk, but anyone exposed to hot weather for an excessive period can be susceptible to heat-related illness.

When the body loses excessive water and salt, usually due to sweating, heat exhaustion can occur. Symptoms include sweating, muscle cramps, weakness or exhaustion, headache or dizziness, nausea or vomiting and rapid heart rate.

Uncontrolled heat exhaustion can evolve into heat stroke. Signs include body temperature above 103 degrees and skin that is flushed, dry and hot to the touch. Sweating has usually stopped and breathing is rapid. The victim also may exhibit irrational or belligerent behavior and convulsions or unresponsiveness.

The best way to avoid a heat-related illness is to limit exposure outdoors during hot days, especially during the hottest period from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention advises seeking out air conditioning, if available, when needing to cool off, and drinking fluids regularly — but avoid alcohol.

Wear loose, lightweight clothing, a hat and sunscreen, as sunburn affects the body's ability to cool itself. Those engaged in exercise or sports activities should pace themselves when running or exerting their bodies.

Water safety is also an area of emphasis this season as individuals and families head to pools and beaches. The USA Swimming Foundation reported nearly 90 children younger than 15 drowned in a pool or spa from January through May 2018, and every year about 19 children drown during the July 4 holiday. The Consumer Product Safety Commission has compiled the following statistics:

- 74 percent of drowning incidents for children younger than 15 between 2015 and 2017

occurred in residential locations

- Boys younger than 15 die from drowning at twice the rate of girls

- Emergency departments treat about 6,400 pool and spa injuries in children younger than 15 every year

The NSC and CPSC hold an annual pool safety campaign focused on reducing child drowning in pools and spas by encouraging people to follow five simple steps to stay safer in and around water:

- Designate a water watcher every single time children are in or near the water.

- Make sure one's children know how to swim.

- As a parent or guardian, learn CPR.

- Always remove portable pool ladders when not in use.

- Ensure all permanent pools have a proper fence and gate and safer drain cover.

Adhering to these guidelines will go a long way to keep everyone safe these final weeks of summer and allow all to devote attention to other important matters — like which flavor ice cream to choose.

Missed Cheesecake Day? Still time to celebrate!

I baked my first cheesecake under duress.

Dan and I were newly married, living in an apartment in Wrigleyville, and we had invited his parents over for a Saturday night dinner.

Being young and foolish, we had indulged in some merriment the night before. Overindulged, to be truthful.

And so much of Saturday was spent recuperating on the couch. I don't think I started working on dinner until about two hours before my in-laws were expected to arrive. Somehow, I managed to pull it off. Dinner was tolerable, if memory serves me. The cheesecake was a success!

Since that meal, I've accumulated several cookbooks devoted to may favorite dessert and a stand mixer and food processor to make preparation easier.

There are just a few tricks to making a good cheesecake. Use room temperature ingredients, beat the cream cheese longer than the directions indicate and scrape the sides of the bowl frequently. Also, wrap the pan with foil, lest you set an electric oven on fire.

National Cheesecake Day was

Tuesday, but when it comes to cheesecake, it's never too late to celebrate. Since I shared the recipe for our annual Christmas toffee cheesecake (my absolute favorite) in an article a few years back, I've chosen a white chocolate cheesecake with strawberries (an extremely close runner-up) to reprint.

The recipe, which I first read in Bon Appetit, says it serves 12 to 14. Not at my house.

Ingredients

Crust

1 9-ounce package chocolate wafer cookies, broken into pieces
1/2 cup (1 stick) unsalted butter, melted

Filling

1 pound good-quality white chocolate (such as Lindt or Baker's), finely chopped
4 8-ounce packages cream cheese, room temperature
1 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
4 large eggs
1 cup sour cream
1/2 cup whipping cream

Pamela Lannom

2 tablespoons vanilla extract
Topping
3 1-pint baskets strawberries, hulled, halved
1/2 cup apricot preserves
2 tablespoons brandy (optional)

Preparation

For crust:

Position rack in center of oven; preheat to 325°F.

Butter 10-inch-diameter springform pan. Wrap outside of pan with foil. Finely grind cookies in processor. Add melted butter; process until crumbs are moist. Press crumbs onto bottom and 2 inches up sides of pan. (I use a little less butter and do not press the crumbs up the side.) Bake until set, about 15 minutes. Cool on rack. (Or place in freezer for 10 minutes.) Maintain oven temperature.

For filling:

Stir white chocolate in top of double boiler set over barely simmering water until melted and smooth. Remove from over water. (Or microwave good-quality chips, such as Ghiradelli, following package directions.) Cool to lukewarm, stirring occasionally.

Using electric mixer, beat cream cheese in large bowl until fluffy, about 3 minutes. Gradually add sugar, then salt; beat until smooth. Add eggs 1 at a time, beating well after each addition. Add sour cream, whipping cream and vanilla; beat until well blended.

Bake cake until top begins to brown but center still moves slightly when pan is gently shaken, about 1 hour 20 minutes. Open oven door slightly; turn off oven. Leave cake in oven 30 minutes. Chill cake uncovered overnight. (Can be made 2 days ahead. Cover; keep refrigerated.)

Run small knife between pan sides and cake. Release pan sides. Starting at outer edge of top of cake, arrange strawberry halves in slightly overlapping concentric circles, covering top completely. Stir preserves and brandy in heavy small saucepan over medium heat until mixture boils. Strain preserves. Brush glaze generously over strawberries, allowing some glaze to drip between berries. (Can be made 4 hours ahead. Chill.)

Ten wishes for my son and us all

My baby just turned 10 and, even setting aside my emotional baggage over that, it is a momentous birthday. This milestone involves special traditions in our home, the most sentimental of which is a letter from me entitled "10 Wishes."

Jen Dean

I outline 10 things about my child right now that make me proud and 10 wishes I have for their future selves.

As I worked on this last letter, I realized it is a list that we could all use right now. So I humbly offer up an abbreviated version of my "10 Wishes" for all of our future selves.

1. Be kind

It sounds easy, but we often forget this simple rule at the most critical times. Trust that your kindness will make your world a better place.

2. Be resilient.

Your ability to snap back from disappointments and failures will help define you. Failure can be a good thing — if you never fail, you've never truly challenged yourself. Bounce back up, dust yourself off and try again, always.

3. Be open and adventurous

New ideas, people, cultures, food — sincerely listen, learn, absorb, push beyond your comfort zone. This world is full of beauty. Be open and embrace it.

4. Be true to yourself

Trust your instincts, know what's in your heart and don't do things you don't want to do. Don't give up on who you are or who you want to be in order to please others.

5. Be tough and tender

Tough when you have to deal with the jerks. Be stronger than the jerks. Stand up for yourself and others who need help. Tender when you offer a shoulder to lean on, a hug to cry into, a helping hand to grasp. Never be afraid to say, "I love you." The world needs more men who can be both. Be one of those men.

6. Be a leader

You are strong, confident, kind and compassionate. Now be a role model. The world needs more strong men doing the right thing. Be one of those men, too.

7. Be a dreamer

This life is more magical when you dream big. Not all dreams are meant to be, but that shouldn't stop you. You'll never know how far you can go until you try.

8. Be the good in the world

There is a lot of ugliness in this world. So many are struggling and need compassion. You can make a difference. Any small change for the better is worth doing.

9. Be happy

Take that moment to acknowledge the good in your life, the things that make you smile, and be forever grateful.

10. Believe in yourself

Be patient. Give yourself plenty of grace. Applaud your successes; accept any (perceived) shortcomings. You are here to do amazing things. "Always remember, you are braver than you believe; stronger than you seem and smarter than you think."

Be a light in this world, fellow humans, and believe in yourselves as I believe in you!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

HHS executive director grateful for time in Hinsdale

I have been let go as executive director of the Hinsdale Historical Society. The board of directors has decided to eliminate the position and restructure the organization. I apologize for unfinished work, missed deadlines and canceled commitments. Personally, I could not just disappear without thanking this community for letting me be a part of your story for the past two and a half years. I thoroughly enjoyed researching your history, learning your unique tales, and sharing it back time-and-time again.

And thank you to so many I got to know and work with during that time:

To my fellow EDs — Tom, Barb, Stan and Annie — for the collaboration and camaraderie.

To those at the chamber, the library and the HPC, for being incredible and supportive partners.

To the staff of The Hinsdalean, for your amazing coverage and community spirit.

To ladies of the HHS Women's Board, for being so gracious and welcoming, and for all your fantastic fundraising efforts.

To the many, many volunteers — especially Janet, David, Jennifer, and Matt — I don't even have the words to express how much your support, work, and dedication meant to me.

And to my biggest champion — Steve — for sharing my vision, encouraging my ideas and just sticking around.

Friends, I hope you will keep in touch, for I shall miss you. I can be reached at lynne.smaczny@gmail.com.

Judge's ruling delays Sterigenics' reopening

Hinsdale and other towns allowed to join lawsuit as legislators work to pass a new bill to protect residents

By Pamela Lannom

plannom@thehinsdalean.com

Municipal and state officials are working to make sure the Sterigenics plant in Willowbrook will not emit ethylene oxide again.

Hinsdale, Burr Ridge, Darien and Willowbrook have a month to try to stop the plant from re-opening. DuPage County 18th Circuit Court Judge Paul Fullerton on July 24 granted the village's motion to intervene to become party to a lawsuit the Illinois Attorney General filed against Sterigenics in October 2018.

"This is a significant achievement," a village press release states.

The towns now must prepare a joint brief outlining their arguments against a consent order filed by Illinois Attorney General Kwame Raoul and DuPage County State's Attorney Robert Berlin that would lift the seal order and provide an avenue for the company to conditionally resume ethylene oxide sterilization processes.

"Since the issue was brought to the village's attention in August 2018, the village of Hinsdale has been working diligently with federal, state and local officials to advocate on behalf of Hinsdale residents," Trustee Luke Stifflear stated in the release.

Raoul and Berlin did not object to the motion to intervene, but they argue that a literal reading of Senate Bill 1852 — known as the Matt Haller Act and signed by Gov. J.B. Pritzker in June — allows Sterigenics to continue to operate in the state. The act, named for 45-year-old Matt Haller who lived near Sterigenics and died in March from stomach cancer, prohibits ethylene oxide sterilization facilities from operating in Illinois unless they capture 100 percent of ethylene oxide emissions and reduce those emissions to 0.2 parts per million. It also prevents companies currently under a seal order from using ethylene oxide in their sterilization process in the future unless certain conditions are met.

In Springfield, state Sen. Jim Curran (R-41, Woodridge) filed legislation Tuesday that would create a total ban of emissions of ethylene oxide in most manufacturing processes aside from medical supply sterilization by 2021, then entirely by 2022. The bill is more aggressive than the Matt Haller Act, which was the "best bill I could pass at the time," Curran said.

Public outcry over the proposed consent order, combined with recent public statements from Pritzker, could create a new political reality to pave the way for an outright ban, Curran said.

Earlier this month, Pritzker said in a statement that he would sign any measure "up to and including a ban, on the use of ethylene oxide in the state of Illinois," and, if House Leader Jim Durkin requested it, call a special legislative session to discuss new ethylene oxide legislation.

Curran, Durkin and state Rep. Deanne Mazzochi (R-47, Westmont) also have filed an amicus brief contesting the consent order. The next hearing in the case is set for Sept. 6.

"Federal legislators, state legislators, local leaders and the community rightfully objected to the consent order, and they're outraged," Mazzochi stated in a release. "Our community has heard a lot of excuses about it, including one from the governor who opined that we three legislators who represent the surrounding area don't understand the law we worked tirelessly to write and pass.

"On Sept. 6, our communities can finally have their day in court," she asserted, "which they should have had all along before the attorney general decided to strip that power away from them for a paltry $300,000 penalty and an admonition to sin no more."

AGENT PROFILE

CAROL LEE CIKANEK, COLDWELL BANKER

Carol Lee Cikanek learned the basics of the real estate business long before she even dreamed of selling her first house.

Jobs selling floral arrangements, fine china and crystal, and photography equipment and products preceded Cikanek's real estate career. She said all prepared her for success as a real estate broker.

"To me, real estate is incredibly simple," said Cikanek. "To be in sales, you have to know what you're selling."

Cikanek is a broker with Coldwell Banker's downtown Hinsdale office. Throughout her 30-year career, the longtime Hinsdale resident has sold more than 750 homes near the downtown area alone.

"There's nothing I don't know about Hinsdale," Cikanek said — a knowledge base built through years of not only living in the village, but serving as a soccer coach, a school room mom, a church volunteer and a member of the Hinsdale Plan Commission.

After taking time to raise her three sons, Cikanek turned to real estate as a way to re-enter the workforce while still having time for her family and her community.

After taking a couple of real estate law classes at College of DuPage and earning her real estate license, she sold her first home in 1989.

Through the last three decades Cikanek has seen the market through peaks and valleys. She's watched interest rates rise and markets change.

But one thing that has never wavered is the appeal of Hinsdale to the prospective homeowner.

Another constant is the tagline Cikanek adopted more than 30 years ago and still uses today.

"Your Village Realtor," she said, speaks to her focus on the Hinsdale community.

Different buyers want different things, Cikanek said.

It's her job to listen to that list of wants and to help the buyer prioritize.

"You have to help them get their needs, wants and desires as close to their list as you possibly can," she said.

Cikanek bought her first Hinsdale home in 1974 for $25,000. While she can't come near that price today, Cikanek said she always advocates for the best price for her client, whether she's selling a home or helping someone to buy one.

"I'm here to tell you that Hinsdale is affordable," said Cikanek, who is seeing the current market beckon young adults back to the village where they grew up.

Along with the market, the job of a real estate broker also has changed in the years since Cikanek entered the business. The internet has made more information immediately available not only to her, but to buyers and other agents, as well.

"You have to be looking at the internet every day and analyzing the data that comes from it," Cikanek said.

Cikanek said her goal is to use the abundance of information available, and her years of experience, to turn every client into an informed, confident buyer or seller who knows they've made the right choice for themselves and their family.

Double IPAs? Sours? The new brews

Expanding craft breweries get innovative with styles for customers

By Ken Knutson

kknutson@thehinsdalean.com

The final installment of our series on Hinsdale-area microbreweries ventures eastward to explore what's on tap at Blue Nose Brewery, BuckleDown Brewing and Imperial Oak Brewing.

And don't forget — tomorrow is International Beer Day, the perfect occasion to pour a pint of something new. There are certainly a lot more crafters and varieties available within just a short drive than ever before. Perhaps one of the nine breweries we've profiled in this series has the brew for you. Cheers!

Blue Nose Brewery

Blue Nose Brewery co-founder Nate Garcia envisioned opening a tap room in Chicago, catering primarily to the millennials who have helped ignite the exploding craft beer industry.

But when lease rates proved prohibitive, they set up shop in Justice before moving into their Hodgkins digs in 2015. And that has meant a much different mix of folks bellying up to the bar.

He enjoys seeing his generationally diverse clientele, especially the middle-aged couples looking to expand their hop horizons.

"Most of our customers in this area are families and 35 plus," Garcia said, refuting the notion of an age gap when it comes to microbrews. "I see more 35 plus than I see 21 to 35."

A large sign on the facade reading "BREWERY" leaves no ambiguity about the nature of the operation inside. Above the bar, Garcia's hand-painted wooden tap menu boards artfully display the day's offerings for patrons. He and business partner Jordan Isenberg poured the concrete bar counter themselves, and they also create the graphics for their cans.

"I made a joke on one (online) post that we even mine our aluminum ore," he said with a laugh.

Starting with one 10-barrel unjacketed fermenter, Blue Nose now has several 10- and 20-barrel units along with its own canning line.

"That's pretty cool to see that growth happen," Garcia said. "We're proud to be part of that."

The brewery also takes pride in its inventive "kettle sour" beers, which is an acquired taste for some.

"Not a lot of places do that kind of thing," Garcia remarked, saying three sips are needed to acclimate. "Unlike wild sours, it's a lot more controlled, and we can be confident in our same flavor profile over and over again," he said.

Getting their beers into bars remains a challenge. But having the tap room has been the perfect way to reach customers directly.

"This area is amazing and people have been checking us out," he said.

Double IPAs? Sours? The new brews

At BuckleDown Brewing in Lyons, co-founders Sean Mahoney and Ike Orcutt have expanded their original stock of three beers in the last six years — and accumulated scores of devotees in the process. “The tap room is a good way to have people try beers, see what we’re all about,” Mahoney said.

BuckleDown Brewing

The offbeat charm of craft breweries can be enhanced by the off-the-beaten-path locations they inhabit. Take an old former auto repair garage in the middle of a Lyons industrial corridor, for example. To friends Sean Mahoney and Ike Orcutt, it was just the kind of raw space they wanted to house the refined creations of their BuckleDown Brewing start-up in 2012.

Mahoney said they had two barometers of success.

“One was to have somebody to try a beer a second time because they liked it. And the other was to recommend it to a friend,” he articulated. Clearly they’ve hit their marks, growing each year as they approach the brewery’s seven-year anniversary and the limits of the site.

“Right now it’s perfect for us,” Mahoney related, saying they currently produce about 5,000 barrels with capacity for up to 9,000. “But the tap room is kind of small, relatively speaking, and parking’s not so great.”

Mahoney and Orcutt were home-brewing enthusiasts when they met, with Orcutt the more accomplished of the two.

“He had been winning awards, and he was a (beer) judge,” Mahoney said.

They opened their doors with three beers on tap and few other suburban rivals. With the rise in the industry since then, Mahoney questioned whether he’d take the same chance today. He’s grateful they were able to link up with a distributor early on to get their beers on shelves across the state.

“We’re just lucky to have a bit of a foundation and a customer base,” he said. “It’s crazy how many breweries are happening right now.”

And the rise of enthusiasm for craft beers helps quench complacency and draw in newbies. “I think that it creates a more savvy customer, so you have to make sure that the beer is quality and consistent.” Mahoney said. “It’s like any good food: if it’s nuanced and balanced, you can convert some people.”

Imperial Oak Brewing

Grant Hamilton’s father-in-law is fiercely loyal to Miller High Life. But he’s also a big fan of the double IPA “Prediction? ... Pain” served at Hamilton’s Imperial Oak Brewing.

“What is it that makes everybody from that light, macro-beer, anti-craft scene tag onto that beer?” Hamilton posed rhetorically. “It’s twice as strong and super-hoppy. I don’t know — they go for it.”

The microbrewery has been making fans since 2014 at its tap room and facility tucked between Archer Avenue and the Cal-Sag Channel in Willow Springs village center. Hamilton and his partners, Brett Semenske and Chris DiBraccio, initially figured the Metra Heritage Corridor station across the street would generate a lot of traffic. But another mode of transport has helped propel the business.

“Being so close to the paved corridor (cycling) trail, you get the everyday rider to the hard-core distance biker,” he said, adding that forest preserve mountain bike trails are also nearby. “We get those guys coming in here, knocking mud off their shoes for a beer.”

Hamilton said the tap room usually has about 18 beers on tap, with regular changes to keep enthusiasts on their toes.

“We don’t brew really big batches. We just brew a lot of different stuff, continually rotating through styles and versions of those styles,” he remarked.

The business doubled its footprint about two years ago when it took over the space next door. “We can make more beer, and different kinds of beer and have more space for you to come and drink it,” Hamilton said.

A front patio affords an open-air spot for patrons to savor their summertime selections, often light lagers and Hefeweizen, before the heavier autumn brews take over, he said. Imperial Oak also serves wine and cocktails for those less inclined toward beer.

“It’s nice to have a good variety of food every time you come in, and the beer is always different, too,” Hamilton said. “So it’s easy to make everybody happy.”

Imperial Oak Brewing co-founders Grant Hamilton and Brett Semenske have built a space at their Willow Springs site to accommodate special events as well as barrels for brewing sour beers. Hamilton even applies his woodworking skills to create handles for the taps.

Local Realtor Highly Recommended

What impressed us immediately about Carol Lee was her detailed research and preparation before even listing our house. Her experience and knowledge of the Hinsdale market, down to a block by block level, were critical in selling our home on a timely basis. Her assessment of the pluses and minuses of our home and how they related to current market conditions led to important changes in strategy and presentation resulting in a successful sale. During the time our house was on the market she was involved with us on a daily basis offering help and suggestions going way beyond our expectations. Carol Lee led us through the entire process, communicating extremely well and positioning our house to the fullest advantage. She is a consummate professional, very pleasant to work with, and we are so glad we chose her as our realtor.

BATTER UP! Hidden in the above frame is a famous proverb. You can find it by reading every other letter as you go around it clockwise. The trick is finding the right first letter.

LINK-UPS! Here's a list of 12 short words, divided into two columns. Turn them into six longer words by linking them together. To do this, draw a line from one word in the left column to one word in the right.

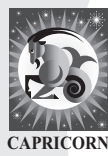

Answers: Antelope, fathers, edition, caprice, dateable, bumpkin.

BROOKS TONN EVENT A SUCCESS

Two recent events held in memory of Brooks Tonn, a 10-year-old Hinsdale boy who loved baseball and football and passed away in 2017, raised money for the Brooks Strong Foundation.

The second annual Brooks Tonn Memorial 11U tourney held June 18-23 at Hinsdale Central and Peirce Park in Hinsdale, Walker School in Clarendon Hills and the Oak Brook Park District raised $3,000. Barrington Red won the title at the three-game event, which was hosted by the Devils Baseball Club.

Participating teams included the Devils Black (3-0), Devils Red (2-1) and Devils

White (2-1) teams.

The Brooks Tonn Golf Tournament July 1 at Chicago Highlands Golf Club drew 140 golfers (and 175 dinner guests) and raised $75,000. Costs were underwritten by 25 corporate and family sponsors.

The mission of the Brooks Strong Foundation is to grant scholarships to kids to kids going through cancer treatment, raise awareness and fund research to help kids fighting cancer.

SOCCER TEAM WINS NATIONAL TITLE

Ardit Abdullai of Hinsdale and his teammates on the Eclipse Select 13-U soccer team won the US Club Soccer

Boy's National Cup XVII Championship in Commerce City, Colorado, July 23.

Red Devils prepare to don new uniforms

Continued from Page 42 should be a little more serious. I'm just really excited to be in an environment where everyone wants to get better and everyone wants to compete at their highest level. There needs to be a balance between fun and serious, and I'm hoping college can get that right. I ultimately want to play golf at the highest level, so in college it will be important to spend any bit of free time trying to get better.

Bella Pisani
University of South Carolina, cross country/track

I'll remember: all the great relationships I made during my time at Hinsdale Central, especially the ones I made through playing sports. I met my best friends during track and cross country and it really made my high school experience special, because I got to enjoy it with people who I was close with.

I'm looking forward to: improving my race times as a runner because I know that there's a lot more depth in competition in college, which I know will push me to be my best. I'm also looking forward to meeting all my new teammates and getting to experience the next four years with them.

Matthew Rush
Washington University (St. Louis), football

I'll remember: bonding with my teammates and coaches at Hinsdale Central. I will remember all the effort and time that the people at the school put in to see us succeed.

I'm looking forward to: creating new friendships with my future teammates, and I will also be looking forward to four more years of playing the sport I am very passionate about, as well as receiving a great education.

Ethan Ruth
Illinois Wesleyan University, track and field

I'll remember: the team atmosphere that we had as well as the coaching staff being involved and looking out for our best interest. My overall best memory from my time at Central was the state series my senior year. When I qualified at the state meet, my whole team was there to cheer me on, and when I finished the race, everyone — including the coaches — ran over to congratulate me. The feeling of having your whole team behind you is one of the best feelings I think you can have in any situation.

I'm looking forward to: meeting new people on my team in college as well as being able to compete at a high level with other great programs. I have been really excited this whole time for the start of my collegiate career, and I can't wait to travel to some of the meets we have this upcoming year. I am also excited for a sport-specific change, which is the switch from 39- to 42-inch hurdles in the 110s and from 300-meter to 400-meter hurdle races. The higher hurdles present more of a challenge for me, but the longer hurdle race in the intermediate height is my better event and I cannot wait to start racing that distance.

Kristiana Strtak
University of Vermont, lacrosse

I'll remember: an excellent education, endless opportunities and friendships that are sure to last a lifetime. I'll always remember the community gathering for sporting events and cheering loud and proud for the Red Devils.

I'm looking forward to: playing competitive D1 lacrosse and being a part of a strong, bonded team.

Mike Ward
University of St. Thomas, cross country/track

I'll remember: the people. The friends I have made in my one year at Central through sports are the best friends I have ever had. They will be friends for life, and they have had a long-lasting impact on my life.

I'm looking forward to: meeting new people in college. Hinsdale Central is definitely a very diverse school, but college is completely different. There are people from all over the country and even the world. I can't wait to be part of a new team once again and establish more friends that I will remember for the rest of my life.

Vincent Zelisko
Denison University, football

I'll remember: The brotherhood and family that's created. A lot of teams talk about being a family, and claim they are one, but are they actually? Hinsdale really does a great job of creating those bonds within your teammates on and off the field.

I'm looking forward to: starting a new chapter in my life. It's almost like hitting the reset button. You know little to no people — you have to recreate friendships and bonds with your teammates. You have to start figuring out how to do things on your own. I'm excited to see new competition and have new teammates and hopefully be able to make a deep run in the playoffs for a national championship.

For cancer patients, their family and friends, and caregivers, it's difficult to cope with worry and stress brought about by diagnosis, demanding treatments, and what comes after. These emotional effects can lead to unexpected challenges in work and home life, possibly even impacting the success of treatment and recovery. We understand this challenge.

Together, we'll help you adapt to a new life after a cancer diagnosis.

Central's class of 2019 sporting standouts extend playing careers at college programs

By Pamela Lannom

plannom@thehinsdalean.com

Commencement ceremonies in May meant the end of competition for many athletes who played for Hinsdale Central.

But a few dozen former Red Devils will have the chance to continue their careers at the college level. The Hinsdalean asked those who have committed to play what they will miss most about Central and their hopes for the next four years.

This is the first in a two-part article.

Samantha Brescia
University of Oregon,
lacrosse

I'll remember: the bonds and connections I made with people. I was a part of the lacrosse team all four years, and when you spend that much time with people, you get to know them really, really well. Growing up with two brothers, the girls on the team were like my sisters. The bonding we did off the field was what made a huge difference on the field for us. We wouldn't just go to practice and be done with each other. We ate together, went out together and trained together. I will never forget the memories I made with all the girls. We shared our successes and our failures, and I have so much love for all the girls that made my years at Central memorable.

I'm looking forward to seeing how much better I can get. I will have access to a lot of resources in college that will help me grow as a player. There is going to be more training, more hours and harder competition. I played defense my last two years of high school, which took me out of my usual midfielder position and gave me a different skill set. I am excited to push myself into being someone who is capable of playing all ends of the field.

Kayla Byrne
Northwestern University, cross country/track

I'll remember: my teammates and all the memories we have had. There is something about being in high school that makes balancing friends and the team difficult, but they made it so easy — and I know I have made lifelong friends.

I'm looking forward to: the new level of intensity at Northwestern. Running in particular is the kind of sport where what you put in is what you get out of it, and I'm looking forward to seeing how hard I can push myself over the next four years and how far I can improve.

Jack Cain
Colgate University,
lacrosse

I'll remember: the people I got to meet and become friends with.

I'm looking forward to: playing and living with a group of people that want the same thing that I do, which is competing — and winning — at the highest level possible.

Sydney Collignon
University of Denver,
lacrosse

I'll remember: winning state my junior year. We worked so hard throughout the season and winning state made the whole experience 10 times better. The friendships I made from playing lacrosse at Hinsdale Central will last a lifetime, and I am grateful for those girls for pushing me each day to be better.

I'm looking forward to: playing at a higher level with girls from all across the country. I am excited for new experiences and becoming a better player and person.

Jacqueline Dorsett
Villanova University, cheer

I'll remember: the people I met at Central. They made my time in high school so enjoyable. I will also never forget the Friday night games cheering under the lights with the whole town watching.

I'm looking forward to: being a part of a new community of people cheering on the school. Villanova has a large school spirit and I am excited to be a part of it.

Gabe Larson
University of North

Georgia, golf

I'll remember: besides the homework, winning three state championships and making great friends on and off the team.

I'm looking forward to: playing with and against some really good players and continuing to improve my game.

Josh Lundmark
Cornell University, golf

I'll remember: when I chipped in on the last hole to win the state golf tournament by one stroke.

I'm looking forward to: competing at Ivies and hopefully finding myself and my team in a position to compete and NCAAs.

Mac McClear
University of Iowa, golf

I'll remember: the good times we had as a team during our season. It was so fun to play and practice with all our friends. We keep it pretty light so there are a lot of jokes going around, which makes it really fun.

I'm looking forward to: college a lot because it
